NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1889.

Another Stride Taken Towards the Trial of Hanna Southworth.

True Bill Against Her for Murder in the First Degree.

Arraigned Before Recorder Smyth in General Sessions.

She Pleads "Not Guilty" of Murdering Pettus and is Taken Back to the Tombs.

She looked up at the Recorder with a frightened glance and then at Clerk Hall, as he called out in a loud tone:

CALLED TO THE BAR. "Hanna B. Southworth to the bar!" "She is here, Your Honor," replied Mr.

"Hanna Southworth," continued the clerk, you are indicted for murder in the first degree for killing one Stephen Pettus with pistol, powder and bullet; how do you plead?" Mrs. Southworth did not answer.

"She pleads not guilty," said Mr. Howe, Attorney for as speedy a trial as possible." "I propose to try this case at the Decembe term, Your Honor," replied Col. Fellows. Recorder Smyth then signed an order re committing Mrs. Southworth to the Tombs withbut bail to await her trial at such date.

She was immediately taken back to prison.

Her mother accompanied her to the court.
The evidence which was laid before the Grand July is identical with that which was brought out at Coroner Levy's inquest yesterday. THE PRISONER QUIET.

THE PRISONER QUIET.

Mrs. Southworth passed a quiet night after her orieal vesterday contrary to the expectations of some of her friends, who thought that she might relapse into the hysterical condition which she manifested when she was first received at the Tombs, owing to the excitement attending her appearance in public.

Mr. Howe said this morning that she was even taken than she was yesterday, and since the proceedings before the Coroner she had shown decided satisfaction with the result.

She seemed to experience a feeling of great this flow that the first ordeal had been passed, and apparently did not dread anything that might follow.

Wisited by her relatives,
Mrs. Martin, her mother, and her two brothers were at the Tombs early this morning and were admitted to her cell.
They also had a conference with Mr. Howe subsquently. None of them will talk about the face except so far as to reiterate their confidence the favorable result of the trial, and their beteef that Hanna had done perfectly right to take summary vengeance upon her betrayer and seducer. VISITED BY HEB RELATIVES,

Those telltake letters.

The friends of Stephen Pettins were astonished his morning when they read the letters alleged to have been written to Mrs. Southworth by Mrs. Rosa Lloyd, fac-similes of which were britted in this morning's Woald.

These letters are said to have been written in Amary ast, immediately after Mr. Murrell.

Str. Lloyd's father, had ordered Mrs. Southworth from the house, having heard of her influency with Misjor Pettins, on which occasion the two wennen discovered that they both had been victims of the Major. THOSE TELLTALE LETTERS.

TO BE USED ON THE TRIAL. These letters, which Mr. Howe, Mrs. South worth's counsel, says are accurate reproseduling of the originals in his possession, and blick will be used on the trial, show that Mr. fettas had been on terms of intimecy with Mrs. Southworth.

The mrt. The mrt. the most positive proof of this is given in the following in ssive, which Mr. Howe says is but one of the many samples of documentary evidence which will be forthcoming for Mrs. South-Worth's defense:

My Dran Hanna: I sympathize fully with yen, and believe what you say shock beephen Pettus. I know see would not voluntarily have submitted to his sma-braces. I know what a black-hearted scaundred he is, for by his in amons acts long years shore be seduced me and indicated me to yield to his solicitations. It is with shame I contrast it, but I feel I must stand by you in this matter. Sincerely your friend. Ross.

Mrs. Lloyd has denied the authorship of the letters, but not under cath, and she will be called upon to testify at the trial if necessary.

As yet none of the Major's friends have attempted to deny the lacts contained in the letters.

In another of the missives the writer reiterates the statment of her betrayal by Mr. Pettus, and conclose with Mrs. Southworth in her hour of affliction.

An Evenina Wonth reporter called at the Murrell residence on Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, this morning. The shutters were all closed, blinds drawn and the premises looked deserted.

Persistent ringing at the bell brought an elderly woman to the door, who said she was the housekeeper.

Mrs. Lloyd was there, she said, but would see no one, nor would any member of the family see visitors.

The Guarantee Fund Is Only a Few Passengers and Crew of the Burned Santiago Landed this Morning.

There is Some Talk of Increasing Capt. Potter's Graphic Account of His Ship's Disaster.

'The World's" Personal Canvass Fund A Woman and Her Baby, with 57 Others, at Sea In Open Boats.

The fifty-nire passengers and erew of the ill fated steamer Santiago were landed by a special tug at the Barne Office about 9 o'clock this merning. The sailors went to a boarding-house, while the passengers, including pincky Mrs. reeding, but when the Fund is completed, a Knight and her fourteen-months-old baby girl, went to the Stevens House on lower Broadway. Richard Potter, commander of the Santiago, went to 22 State street, the office of Sanderson & Co., New York agents for the Wilson line of steamships, to which the burned Santiago belonged. There Capt. Potter narrated in a graphic manner the story of the burning of his graphic manner the stery of the burning of his ship.

To back at the beginning, "he raid, "we left our dock in Hoboken on the morning of the 17th just, loaded with cotton and cattle. There were four pass-careers on board, Mrs. Knight, her baby girl, W. Wadsworth and Charles Joy. In addition there were fifty-five meu, comprising the effects and crew on beard.

"We had clear weather to start with, and it continued during the 18th and 18th.

"About 4.30 on the afternoon of the 19th smoke was noticed coming up from the hatches and through the deck seams. Upon investigation we found the catton all ablaze.

"The fire gained headway rapidly, and at 5 r. w. we put the ship before the wind to reseen the draught.

"There were five separate longths of hose them pouring water on the burning cotton, but the fire steadily gained.

"At 5, 30 of lock the steering gear was burned away and the vessel was beyond our control.

"At 4.5 r. w. the after-deck gave way with a crash, and the flames mounted high in the air.

"At 6.45 r. M. the after-deck gave way with a crash, and the flames mounted high in the air."

"How were the passengers and crew acting all this time?" asked the reporter.

"Admirably. Mrs. Knight, with her baby in her arms, stood amidships conversing calmly with Mr. Joy as they watched the progress of the faces. They could do nothing but await developments.

"Ms salors in squads fought the flames, and although insuccessful in the battle deserve the highest praise for their conduct.

"The fire was not the only danger which threatened us. There was a large lot of cartie aboard. Some of them escaped and immed overloord. Others belowed and tried to break out of their quarters, where they were tied. If they had succeeded in stampeding and had got among the people on the deck, some of as would surery have been trampled to death.

"When did you order out the lifeboats?"

"About 7 r. M., seeing that nothing could be done to save my ship, and that our position on board was momentarly growing more perilons, I gave the order to lead the fieloats and the human irelight was successfully shipped and we droped over the side.

"The fire ga ned in fury then. Soon some of the cattle broke from their fastenings and immed widly overbowed.

"The night was dark and the wind soon rose to a gall to a gall."

The night wa da k and the wind soon rose to a gale.

"Some of the maddened cattle approached dangerously near our frait crafts, and we were obliged to knock some of them on the head to keep them of. We tried to stay by the turning ship, but speedily found that impossible and cut lose.

During the night we were separated, but fortunately we were all picked up safely by Capt, Colcord, of the American ship A. J. Fuller, and we arrived at Quarantine safely yester-

Cap', Colcord, of the Fuller, says that at 4.15 A. M. on the 20th inst, his officers sighted the blazing ship, then about thirty-three miles Liazing ship, then about thirty-three miles away.

He altered the course of the Fuller somewhat, and in about four hours sighted the four boatloads of people adout in the vicinity of the burning vessel and pet ed then up.

None were injured but Chief Officer James Massau and a couple of sailors, who were temporarily blinded by the heat while fighting the flames. They have fully recovered.

Mr. Joy, an experienced traveler, when seen by an Evention Wenth reporter this morning, gave about the same account of the burning of the Santiano as did Capt. Potter.

He was loud in praise of the admirable work of Capt. Potter and his crew, and also of Mrs. Knight, a brayer woman than whom he never met, he said.

met, he said.

He also baid the highest tribute to Capt. Colored and Mrs. Colcord, his wife, of the ship Fuller, for the kind treatment extended by them to the shipwrecked people.

The Wilson line less by the burning of the Santiago about $500,000. The line carries its own insurance. own insurance.

The cause of the fire no one seemed able to tell, but ascribed it to spontaneous combustion. But for the prompt aid rendered by Capt. Colcord it is probable that some of those in the boats would have lost their lives, as they only had a day's provisions and little or no clothing. The passengers lost all they had in the shape of baggage and clothing.

HOPE REARRESTED.

Judge Wheeler Made the Noted Burglar Free for a Few Minutes.

But the Court-Room Doors Were Guarded by Detectives.

Hope Lingered Awhile, but Finally Emerged and Was Retaken.

Jimmy Hope, the the notorious bank burglar and king of cracksmen, was released from cus-tody this morning by decision of Judge Wheeler, after an intensely dramatic and inter-esting session in the United States Circuit Court. Hope was brought from the Tombs by Keepers Price and Evans. He was well dressed in a medium-weight over-cost, new derby and a dark business suit. His face was smooth shaven. Assistant District-Attorney McDons amended his return to the habeas corpus by pleading the revocation of the warrant of extradition granted by Gov. Hill to take Hope to Delaware, and in-by Gov. Hill to take Hope to Delaware, and incorporated in his amendment the warrant and copy of the diovarnor's order of discharge.

Lawyer Charles W. Brooke, in Hope's behalf, pleaded that the burglar had served his term of imprisonment for the oftense for which he was brought here, and recited the fact of his arrest immediately upon his discharge from Auburn, without allowing him an opportunity to return to the State of California.

Mr. Broeke asked that his client be allowed sufficient time to leave the State and that no one be allowed to deter him from doing so.

'I understand there are officers present in this Court who are ready to pounce upon Hope the moment he leaves this building, said Mr. Brooke, with draumtic energy.

She Thought Him an Incendiary. Margaret Sohn, of 60 Broome street, accused Asron Weiners of arson in the Essex Market Court to-day. Weiners said that while painting Mrs. Sohn's house yesterday, his brushes got stiff and he lighted a piece of paper to soften them. Mrs. Sohn saw him, and thinking he was trying to set fire to the house caused his arrest. He was discharged.
